CHATEAU MARCELLUS

About Château Marcellus

Château Marcellus is a Historic French Château located in the Bordeaux region. The 35-hectares property dominates the beautiful Garonne Valley. Built between 1773 and 1775, Château Marcellus shows neo-classic architecture that reflects elegance and nobility. It features a large collection of antiques, sculptures, and architectural pieces from the 16th to the 19th century.

Henri IV, the founder of the Bourbon dynasty and King of France was one of the ancient owners of the Chateau Marcellus.

Heritage Treasures: In the 19th century, the Comte de Marcellus bought the famous Venus de Milo statue from the Turks in Constantinople and brought it to France. In gratitude, King Louis XVIII of France awarded him and commissioned the Louvre to make the first copy of the statue, which to this day exists in the possessions of the Marcellus family.

The Chatelaine

CATHERINE ROGER

I'll always remember the day we saw the facade of the Château Marcellus at the end of the tree-lined driveway. We call it: love at first sight. Then, at the end of 2020, this historic residence has finally become my lovely home and the center of my professional projects.

It's been 3 years now since I've been hosting people from all over the world, organizing special events and gastronomic dinners in this marvelous setting, among refined and romantic 18th-century decor.

For the past seven years, I have cultivated a wealth of knowledge on guest etiquette, drawn from firsthand experiences in some of the most esteemed residences in France. I have attended receptions and dinner parties hosted by diplomats, renowned personalities, and authentic aristocratic families. Now, I am eager to share this wealth of knowledge with you.
